"LEGAL TENDER" IN A PACKED COURT.

The reversal of the legal tender decision which was rendered last year provokes the indignation of thinking men. It is generally regarded, not as the solemn adjudication of an upright and impartial tribunal, but as a base compliance with executive wishes by creatures of the President placed upon the bench to carry out his views. Even the Tribune is scandalized by this outrage upon judicial decorum. It says:

"The Supreme Court yesterday announced decisions in the legal tender act and other cases of less public importance. The formal announcement of the back-action of the court on the question of the constitutionality of the legal tender act, as applied to contracts made before the war, does not differ from that which we have already published. It is a decision in the interests of the great railroad companies, and it has been reached through the instrumentality of their former paid advocates and stockholders now on the bench. The first conclusion of the court has been hastily reversed, but it will not be as easy to restore the public respect and reverence for the tribunal which this decision has sacrificed."

This means that Justices Bradley and Strong, the real counsel of great railroad corporations, were foisted upon the bench by Gen. Grant to reverse the decision rendered last year, and that they have shown their subservient gratitude by ignoring the merits of the question and deciding it in the interest of their former clients, according to the understood wishes of the President who appointed them. In other words, they have not decided as judges, but as notorious accomplices and beneficiaries of the railroad ring. The Tribune is not alone among Republican journals in making this damning accusation. The following paragraph is from a long article in the Evening Post:

"After the main question at issue had been decided by the court, and the decision accepted by the public mind, the government, itself a party to the issue, added to the minority of the court judges already known to have expressed opinions adverse to the decision, in number sufficient to reverse it. Under these circumstances the new decision is necessarily regarded as the voice, not of the law, but of the administration. The new point established by it is not that the decision in the case of Hepburn was wrong, but that, when a decision is made by the court, which takes away the powers of the general government, under the Constitution, that government may reconstitute the court so as to secure a decision less distasteful to it. If this decision is tolerated the Constitution and its interpretation cease to limit the national government, and become just what the appointing power chooses to make them."

What was it that encouraged the knaves, who wished to escape the payment of their just debts according to the terms of their contract, to bring new suits in the face of a decision of the Supreme Court? Why, the fact that General Grant had appointed the attorneys of railroad corporations to the bench with the undisguised purpose of overruling that decision. It is not law and justice which speak in the reversal, but the sic volo, sic jubeo, of an ignorant, timid military commander, who appointed judges to execute his orders. Even his own partisans revolt against this shameful prostitution of our highest judicial tribunal.—N. Y. World.

The Printer and His Types.

The following beautiful extract is from the pen of Benjamin F. Taylor, the printer: "Perhaps there is no department of enterprise whose details are less understood by intelligent people than the 'art preservative'—the achievement of types."

Every day, their life long, they are accustomed to read the newspapers, to find fault with its statements, its arrangements, its looks; to plume themselves upon the discovery of some roughish acrobatic type that gets into a frame and stands upon its head; or of some waste letter or two in it—but of the process by which the newspaper is made, of the myriads of motions and thousands of pieces necessary to its composition, they know little and think less. They imagine they discourse of a wonder, indeed, when they speak of the fair, white carpet woven for thought to walk on, of the rage that flattered on the back of a beggar yesterday. But there is something more wonderful still. When we look at the hundred and fifty-two little boxes, somewhat shaded with the touch of inky fingers, that compose the printer's "case"—noiseless, except the clicking of type, as one by one they take their places in growing line—we think we have found the marvel of the art.

We think how many fragments there are in the boxes; how many atoms of poetry and eloquence the printer can make here and there if he only had a little craft to work by; how many facts in a small "handful" how much truth in chaos.

Now he picks up the scattered elements until he holds in his hand a stanza of "Gray's Elegy," or a monody on Grimes, "All buttoned up before." Now he sets a "puppy missing," and now "Paradise Lost"; he arranges a bride in "small caps," and a sonnet in "nonpareil"; he announces the languishing "live" in one sentence—transposes the words, and deplores the days that are few and "evil" in the next.

A poor tick ticks its way slowly into the printer's hand, like a clock just running down, and a strain of eloquence marches into line letter by letter. We fancy we can tell the difference by hearing of the ear, but perhaps not.

The types that told a wedding, perhaps, announced a burial to-morrow—perhaps the self-same letters.

They are the elements to make a world of—these types are; a world with something in it as beautiful as spring, as rich as summer, and as grand as autumn flowers that frost cannot wilt, fruit that shall ripen for all time.

The newspaper has become the log-book of the age; it tells at what rate the world is running; we cannot find our "reckoning" without it.

True, the green grocer may bundle up a pound of candles in our last expressed thoughts, but it is only coming to base uses, something that is done times innumerable.

We console ourselves by thinking that one can make of that newspaper what he cannot make of living oats—a bridge for time that he can fling it over the chasm of the dead years and walk safely back upon the shadowy sea into the past. The singer shall not end his song, nor the true soul be eloquent no more.

The realm of the press is enchanted ground. Sometimes the editor has had the happiness of knowing that he has defended the right, exposed the wrong, protected the weak; that he has cheered somebody's solitary hour, made somebody happier, kindled a smile upon a sad face, hope on a heavy heart.

He may meet with that sentiment many years after it may have lost all charms of its paternity, but he feels affection for it. He welcomes it as a long absent child. He reads it for the first time, and wonders if, indeed, he wrote it, for he has changed since then. Perhaps he could not give utterance to the sentiment now—perhaps he would not if he could.

It seems like the voice of his former self calling to his parents, and there is something mournful in its tone. He begins to think—to remember why he wrote it, where were his readers then, and whether they have gone—what was he then, and how much he has changed. So he muses, until he finds himself wondering if that thought of his will continue to float after he is dead, and whether he is really looking upon something that will survive him. And then comes the sweet consciousness that there is nothing at all in the sentence that he could wish to withdraw—that it is a better part of him—a shred from a garment of immortality he should leave behind when he joins the "innumerable caravan," and takes his place in the silent halls of death.

An Amazing Story

Is told here in connection with one of the last State dinners given by Grant, which is worth reproducing, as showing how hard it is for the Radicals to swallow the theories which they are engaged in promulgating. The Haytian Minister, who is as black as the ace of spades, is hardly ever invited on diplomatic occasions, and even then this is done in such a formal manner that his self-respect forbids him from accepting. On the present occasion the Haytian Minister being absent in New York—Grant considered it a good opportunity to gain some capital by inviting him to the dinner, hoping that he would not find it convenient to return as requested. But the sable Representative from the West Indies packed up his baggage, and taking the first train, arrived here on the very night of the dinner, and presented himself at the White House. He was received very coolly by the persons present, snubbed by all the ladies, and treated so gruffly by Grant himself, that he soon found it convenient to retire.—Washington Cor. Lou. Ledger.

LOST.—On Sunday, 7th of May, 1871, a gold chain and locket; somewhere between Landon Thomas and the Presbyterian Church; the name of Annie engraved on locket. The finder will be liberally rewarded by leaving it at this office.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.—From the premises of J. N. Crutcher, a small bay horse, with heavy mane and tail. Any one returning said horse to Crutcher's shoe house, Frankfort, will be suitably rewarded.

The vote received by Colonel S. I. M. Major for Lieutenant Governor was as unexpected as it was complimentary, and he begs us to return his thanks to his friends who thus honored him—particularly to those of Old Owen, who nominated him and gave him their full vote. The total vote received was 74½, distributed as follows: Caldwell, 8; Franklin, 14; Henry, 4; Hopkins, 4½; Ohio, 3; Owen, 22; Spencer, 4; Trigg, 6; Trimble, 9.

THOMAS YOUNG COMMITS SUICIDE.—Another instance of the strangely and generally prevailing mania for suicide occurred in this city yesterday afternoon. Thomas Young, a tinner and worker in copper by trade, and lately engaged in the establishment of G. W. Miller, on Main street, yesterday, about 5 P. M., took six grains of morphine; and, although, after it was found out, every effort was made by his friends and a couple of physicians to rescue him, he died from the effects of the poison about 7:30, at a room in the basement of the Capital Hotel.

The deceased came to Frankfort some three years ago from Louisville, where, we understand, he has many relations and friends in good standing in society, who will be deeply pained to hear of his untimely death. He was an excellent workman, as we learn from his employer, making easily his $2 75 a day at his trade; but some months ago, having, like too many others, become addicted to strong drink, his habits got to be so irregular that his employer was compelled to dismiss him. This, together with another mysterious event happening to him in a moment of delicious irresponsibility, it is believed, so preyed upon his mind that on yesterday he deliberately determined on self destruction, with the melancholy success above recorded.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS—CONFEDERATE MONUMENTAL ASSOCIATION.—By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that there will be a theatrical entertainment in this city, at Major Hall, on Friday evening next, 11th inst., for the benefit of the Confederate Monumental Association of this city. A good band of music has been secured for the entertainment.

The object of this theatrical performance being to raise money to erect a suitable monument to the memory of our cherished dead, and the dramatis persone being made up from the youth, beauty, genius, and talent of our own city, it is hardly necessary to urge our people to turn out on Friday evening and fill Major Hall to its utmost capacity. We are quite sure beforehand, that they will give our worthy amateurs a regular "bumper" on the occasion. For one, we would not miss the treat in store for us then for five times the price of a ticket.

A dispatch from Paris says, that the anger of the Versailles troops against the insurgents is terrible—inconceivable; they re-use them quarter; and it is utterly useless for an insurgent officer to ask for mercy. By consequence, the conflicts now going on all around Paris are marked by scenes of unparalleled bloodshed and slaughter. In one "little affair" at Clamart, fully 300 insurgents were transfixed by the bayonet.

Wm. Cassius Goodloe, one of the cleverest Radical editors of our acquaintance, has retired from the Lexington Statesman, and is succeeded by L. P. Tarleton, jr., who is spoken of in high terms by those who know him.

Among the delegates from Hopkins county to our Democratic State Convention last week, we were pleased to make the acquaintance of Mr. Polk Laffoon, a young lawyer of Madisonville, who informs us that he will soon become editorially connected with the Democratic press of the State.

The following members of Congress were in attendance upon the Convention, though none we believe took any active part: Hon. H. D. McHenry, Gen. J. H. Lewis, Hon. W. E. Arthur, Hon. J. B. Beck, Hon. G. M. Adams, and Hon. J. M. Rice.

Hon. Robert Roosevelt, of New York, a talented member of Congress from that State, who is indorsed by a Western Republican journal as a "statesman of grand ideas and enlarged political views," is spoken of as a possible Democratic candidate for President in 1872. But most Democrats will think him a little too "enlarged," far too liberal, in his political and personal views, when they find that in one of his recent speeches he eulogized Grant.

The grand jury of Chicago ignored the indictment against A. D. Leonard for the murder of his brother-in-law, Dr. Scanlan, regarding it as a case of justifiable homicide.

The Cincinnati Commercial is begging Gen. Grant, in piteous tones, if he expects to be renominated and re-elected, "to go to work and make friends with Senators Sumner, Schurz, Trumbull, Fenton, and other powerful leaders," now at loggerheads with him.

Edmund About, by long odds, the wittiest of living French writers, and a Bonapartist, is France's Minister to Portugal.

The directors of the Northern Bank for the ensuing year are, M. C. Johnson, Henry Bell, Dr. J. M. Bush, A. H. Davenport, G. W. Brand, Wm. Voorhies, D. W. Boswell, Jno. R. Viley, and John B. Payne, jr., appointed on the part of the State. M. C. Johnson was unanimously re-elected President.

ELECTION OF MAGISTRATES.

The biennial elections for justices of the peace and constables in this State, which came off last Saturday, May 6, were, in this county, so overshadowed by the Democratic State Convention and its results, that but little interest was manifested in them—at least here in Frankfort. It is hardly necessary to say that the question of party politics entered but slightly into these elections. In this (Franklin) county two magistrates and one constable were elected in each of the five civil districts.

In the first, or Frankfort district, George W. Gwin and Phil Swigert were elected magistrates, and F. D. Reddish constable. In the second, or Forks of Elkhorn district, G. C. Hughes and D. F. Head magistrates, and James Gallahue constable. In the third, or Peak's Mill district, Wm. Morris and Milton Wigginton magistrates, and Flournoy Satterwhite constable. In the fourth, or Bridgeport district, John W. Jackson and U. V. Williams magistrates, and George B. Harrod constable. In the fifth, or Bald Knob district, Nelson Moore and James Harrod magistrates, and George Harrod constable.

In the second district both of the magistrates elected are new men; in the first third, fourth, and fifth, the first named in each case, were re-elected, while each of the second named are new to the office.

The following is the official vote of Franklin county for magistrates and constables, on Saturday, May 6th, 1871:

BOSTON SNUBBED—BEAUTIFULLY SNUBBED BY A NEW YORK CELEBRITY.—Whatever may be said of Colonel Jim Fisk's financial operations, it cannot be denied that he can do a good thing upon occasion. Anyhow, he got Boston down—we mean the veritable Hub—the other day, and all the world is in a good humor about it. In the first place, however, Boston tried to snub Fisk and his regiment, but Fisk executed a flank movement on the Governor of Massachusetts and so saved himself. The mayor of Boston told Fisk and his regiment to go to Joricho, or the hottest place they could find; but the Governor was more courteous and gentlemanly; whereupon Colonel Fisk wrote to the mayor this stinger:

"Sir: Having waited a sufficient time for your decision, and my regiment not having received from you the courtesy of a reply, I have applied in the name of my regiment, to His Excellency the Governor of the Commonwealth, for permission to enter your city, and he has most courteously and promptly granted the request. I beg, therefore, that you will relieve the common council from further consideration of the subject, as their action or inaction is a matter of perfect indifference to the gentlemen under my command."

Fancy the drill on Boston Common after this.

We observed by the Washington Patriot that General W. T. Sherman, in testimony of his high opinion of the Artillery School at Fort Monroe, has directed one of his Aides-de-Camp, Col. John M. Bacon, formerly of our city, to join the next year's class of officers under instruction. He was ordered to report May 1, and to pursue one full year's course.

Since the above was written, the following dispatch in the daily papers of yesterday has met our eye.

Col. Bacon, Aid-de-Camp of Gen. Sherman, arrived at Fort Monroe Saturday, and reported for duty at the Artillery School. He came at his own request, and will remain a year and graduate with the class of 1872.

The abolition of the grand jury system by the State of Wisconsin is a step in "the march of improvement" which will have to be explained before we can be sure that it is in the right direction.

OPEN HOSPITALITY.

The citizens of Frankfort, without distinction of party, opened their houses to the members of the Democratic Convention in the most liberal manner. In common with other delegates we have to acknowledge our obligation for hospitality and kindness. Indeed, their hospitality is characteristic of the good people of Frankfort, who are called upon often, and do it more liberally, than the citizens of any town in Kentucky. This is not the first occasion on which we have experienced their liberal hospitality. They are entitled to the thanks of the whole Convention, and we are glad to notice the return was not omitted in the proceedings.—Lexington Gazette.

The thanks of the delegates to the Convention, to the citizens of Frankfort for their generous and abundant hospitality, are justly due. The immense crowd was entertained in the most lavish manner by all the citizens of that beautiful city. In a special manner are the thanks of the members of the press due to Col. J. Stoddard Johnston, who entertained every one connected with it on whom he could lay his hands.—Lexington Observer and Reporter.

In company with quite a number of members of the press in attendance at the Frankfort Convention, we were most hospitably entertained by Col. J. Stoddard Johnston and his brother, Harris Johnston, at their fine residence in South Frankfort. Both these kind and genial gentlemen have our warm consideration for their generous entertainment.

FRANKFORT, KY., May 2—11 P. M. With true Kentucky hospitality, Colonel Stoddard Johnston, editor of the Yeoman, has thrown open his office and residence for the accommodation of members of the press during the session of the Convention.

Cor. Cin. Enquirer.

A large number of editors of the Kentucky press attended the Democratic State Convention and enjoyed the hospitality of Col. J. Stoddard Johnston, the editor of the Frankfort Yeoman. The occasion was a truly delightful one and Col. Johnston's guests left his beautiful home with his genial image enshrined forever in their hearts.—Bowling Green Democrat.

THE SOLDIER AND THE MINISTER.

The following letter from the great Confederate leader on the character of the great Alexander Campbell will be read with interest:

LEXINGTON, VA., Dec. 10th, 1868.

S. M. D., Nicholasville, Ky.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 12th of January, together with a copy of the Millennium Harbinger, of February, 1864, containing an address on the government of colleges, by the late Rev. Alexander Campbell, first President of Bethany College, West Virginia, was received while I was absent for a few days, performing a brief tour in Eastern Virginia, but read by me with as much interest on my return as though it was just arrived. I tender you many thanks for a copy of this address, and regard it as among the ablest productions I ever read. As Dr. Symonds said of the great Milton, so I may say of the late President of Bethany College, "That he was a man in whom were illustriously combined all the qualities that could adorn or elevate the nature to which he belonged." Knowledge, the most various and exalted virtue that never loitered in her career nor deviated from her course. A man, who, if he had been delegated as the representative of his species to one of the superior worlds, would have suggested a grand idea of the human race. Such was President Campbell. Again I return you my thanks for this favor, &c.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE.

It was our fortune, long ago, to hear a similar glowing tribute to the genius and character of the illustrious Campbell, from the late lamented Bishop Otey, of Tennessee.

FRANKFORT, KY., May 8th, 1871.

EDITOR YEOMAN: I hereby return my heartfelt thanks to the true and unflinching Democracy of the Frankfort District who gave me their support on Saturday last for the office of Magistrate. Although defeated, I have the proud consolation to know that I received more white votes than one of my distinguished Radical competitors. I was not put forward by either the Yeoman clique or the Commonwealth ring, as has been charged, but wrote my own card, set up the type, and printed the announcement the night before the election, and had I been elected, the best interest of my native country and the Democratic party would have been my constant aim. To the true and gallant 238 I again thank you for your partiality.

Respectfully,

T. B. ABBOTT.

MORTAL AFFRAY IN ESTILL COUNTY, KENTUCKY—TWO MEN KILLED AND TWO OTHERS DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED.—We learn from two gentlemen of this city, just returned from Fitchburg, of a dreadful fight which took place six miles from that town, at the Miller's Creek voting precinct of Estill county, on Saturday, the day of election, resulting in the instant death of R. S. Sullivan and John Rogers, probably the fatal wounding of James Dugan, from pistol shots, and the dangerous injury of G. W. Carpenter in the head, by blows from a pistol or other weapon. Carpenter and Dugan are hardly expected to survive their injuries.

The shooting and blows on Carpenter appear to have been inflicted by the late Col. John H. Sullivan, State Senator, and brother to the county judge, and a man by the name of Wilson, who resides with him; but conflicting statements as to what transpired are afloat, and it remains for the coroner's inquest to develop facts.

Ross was engaged as engineer at Red River Furnace, Fitchburg, and was much esteemed. He left no family. His parents reside at Estill Furnace, in the same county, and his father is the founder at that place. Sullivan resides at Fitchburg, and leaves a wife and children. Dugan's parents also reside there, and are natives of Estill county. Carpenter resides near the scene of death, and was a foreman in the employ of the Red River Company.

A GREAT OUTRAGE.—The following facts of a great outrage perpetrated in our neighboring county, Metcalfe, ten miles northwest of Edmonston, have been communicated to us from an entirely reliable source: Last Thursday night a week ago, Wiley Fitzgerald, a white man with a family, and a tenant and employee of Mr. Thomas Bass, a well-to-do farmer, was induced by a man named Scott, who was also an employee of Mr. Bass, to go fishing with him to the river, about a mile distant from Bass' farm. Fitzgerald consented to go, and he and Scott started off together after dark, through a dense woods in the direction of the river. They had proceeded, however, only a few hundred yards, when they were halted on the road by a party of four large, stalwart negro men. When the word halt was uttered by the negroes, Scott fled in great haste, but Fitzgerald was seized and overpowered by the negroes who stretched him out in the road and compelled him to submit to a terrible thrashing with hickory switches, each as large around as a man's thumb. The whipping was conducted in a merciless way, and Fitzgerald's back from his shoulders down was made black and blue to a frightful degree. The four negroes were arrested next day and identified by Fitzgerald. The negroes were brought to trial, before the magistrates' court and held to answer at the ensuing term of the Metcalfe circuit court. Mr. Fitzgerald, who was cruelly punished, is a stout, able-bodied laborer, and, during the late war, was a member of the 1st South Kentucky Cavalry. The impression prevails that the motive by which the negroes were actuated in perpetrating the outrage was to compel Fitzgerald to leave the neighborhood in order that they might occupy the cabin in which his family has been living on Mr. Bass' farm.—Bowling Green Democrat.

CONSCIENCE.—A good conscience is to the soul what health is to the body; it preserves a constant ease and serenity within us, and more than counterbalances all the calamities and afflictions which can possibly befall us.
